

The First Signs

“Only those who read the stars by instinct and listen for echoes instead of words will know where to stand—or where not to.”

Olvrída warned that the coming end would first reveal itself through signs easily dismissed by those unwilling to see them:

1. Runes that no longer respond.
2. Animals walking east before dusk.
3. The moon turning her face away.

Only those who read the stars by instinct and listened for echoes rather than words would understand where to stand—or where not to.

Warning: The prophecy does not describe the destruction of Hallowmere alone. It speaks of its Unwriting: a loss so complete that even the memory of what was destroyed may cease to exist.
